

Notice of availability of the draft Recovery Plan for the Rabbitsfoot

We, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, announce the availability of our draft recovery plan for the Rabbitsfoot listed as threatened under the Endangered Species Act (ESA). This freshwater mussel subspecies historically occurred within at least 434 watersheds located throughout the lower Great Lakes and Mississippi river sub-basins and Ohio, Cumberland, Tennessee, White, Arkansas, and Red River systems in 15 states. It is presumed extirpated from 288 of those watersheds, a reduction of between 63% and 70% of its historical range.

Section 4(f) of the ESA requires us to provide public notice and an opportunity for the public to review and comment during recovery plan development. Additionally, we seek comments from Federal, Tribal, State, and local governments. We are particularly interested in additional information regarding the current threats to the species, ongoing beneficial management efforts, and the costs associated with implementing the recommended recovery actions. We will consider all information presented during the public comment period. Comments may or may not result in changes to the recovery plan; comments regarding recovery plan implementation will be forwarded as appropriate to Federal or other entities so that they can be taken into account during implementation of recovery actions.

Dates: To ensure consideration, we must receive written comments on or before November 14, 2022 after the comment period opens. However, we will accept information about any species at any time.
